MODICA

Modica, a town of ancient and noble origins (once the main town of the so called “Contea di Modica”), is today a coveted tourist destination for demanding tourists who choose it for their holiday, eager to know its history and attracted by its beauty.

The baroque style of its noble mansions and its numerous churches built with hard limestone, quarried in the local area, create a suggestive, old times landscape.

The town, a UNESCO world heritage centre, has a perfect balance between rationality and beauty and can be considered, on the whole, a living museum-town.

It was the birthplace of Salvatore Quasimodo and in 1713 it was already the fourth most populated sicilian town (19,000 inhabitants).

It has been thriving ever since, with an economy based on agriculture and zootechny and a well class with a high cultural level.

A modern and dynamic commercial activity has contributed to its development today. Museums, churches, noble mansions, exhibitions and shows make Modica a real art town.

Now just a little mention to its typical gastronomy: do not leave Modica without tasting its rich pastry products, the most important of which is the “Modica chocolate”.
